

Creating New Provider Organisations

If there is to be real and substantial change in the social care system, there needs to be an increase in the range and type of providers. It is really rare for new providers to come on the scene, yet often it is when an organisation is at its newest and smallest that it is most innovative. We have substantial experience of creating new small, person centred provider organisations that are able to support people with the most complex of needs.

OUR WORK

- Senior staff who have created and led provider organisations.
- Senior staff who have been Commissioners and stimulated the development of new providers.
- A full range of back-up support to new providers.
- A flexible and bespoke approach for every customer.
- We can do as much or as little as our customers want.

WHY PARADIGM?

- A distinctive, person centred approach to provision.
- Plenty of experience of commissioning and provision.
- Expertise in company formation.
- We can be completely flexible, even acting as a host, to help create a new organisation.
- We are great at talent spotting for potential new directors of organisations.

WHAT YOU WILL ACHIEVE?

- You will get greater diversity of provision locally.
- You will get a 'new kid on the block' – enthusiastic to do things differently and in a clear person centred way.
- One way to enable the shift envisaged in the policy shift towards Self Directed Support.
- A provider that is focused on the needs of those people who are the highest priority.
